"We should treat our nation's drug epidemic as a health crisis and less as a 'lock 'em up and throw away the key' problem"- KY Sen. Rand Paul

At Frontier Behavioral Health, we view addiction as a disease that creates genuine biological, psychological, social and spiritual problems for the individual. We also believe that, as in other health conditions, self-management, with mutual support, is very important in recovery from addiction. We are committed to helping you in every area of your life to improve your chances of full recovery.

According to the American Society of Addiction Medicine- "Recovery from addiction is best achieved through a combination of self-management, mutual support, and professional care provided by trained and certified professionals." At Frontier, that is exactly what we seek to provide all clients.

Our Mission Statement

Frontier Behavioral Health provides holistic treatment of addiction in a safe, supportive environment.

Think recovery is impossible? Think again.

The research backs this up: Various studies, including systematic reviews of addiction research, have found that medication-assisted treatment can cut the opioid dependence rates among addiction patients by half or more.

“This program saved my life”

A Holistic Approach

Frontier Behavioral Health institutes a comprehensive model of recovery that focuses on counseling, medical services, case management (which deals with accessing and linking community resources like job assistance and housing to improve clients’ quality of life), and peer support services along with Medication Assisted Treatment.
